

Executive Summary

The following graph shows the work being done on .java files by our team throughout the life of the project. Some of the earlier contributors such as Mat (in green) contributed much to the project in the beginning but left soon after. Others, such as Scott and Mathew have contributed much throughout the entire life of the project. A majority of the contributors that have worked on the project only worked on the project for a very short time and seem to have left. We do not expect a majority of the maintainers to stay for very long. If you wish to recognize any of the maintainers for their work, you should recognize Scott Alexander-Bown and Matthew Rolling as they have contributed much and for the longest. The graph only show work being done on java files so further analysis is needed to see how much work is being done on the various other file types that our project uses.

The command “git log” was a command that I had not yet used and I could see being useful for future projects.
